從法制面看植物育種家的權利保護

Re-examining Plant Breeder's Right: A Legal Perspective

何美瑩 Mei-Ying Ho

Abstract

The arguments concerning agricultural intellectual property right are in hot dispute recently. With the admittance of Taiwan into World Trade Organization and being a member country, the commitment to ensure an open market, and to reduce trade barrier. is expecting to affect the valuable domestic agriculture system. However, the most concerned Plant Variety Act has not been amended simultaneously to ensure a better protection of plant breeder's right. Therefore, it is the purpose of this article to re-examine the current scope of Plant breeder's Right and how it lags behind the international development as well as the issue of whether plant patents should be granted in the future.
